

Fabio Nunes about the Lusitano

“I started my career working António Ribeiro Telles’ horses, a well known bullfighter. There, I got a lot of experience with lusitano horses. The lusitano is a very easy horse to teach, they are very docile. For the bulls they have lots of special skills, most of all because they are extremely easy. These horses were bred for battle and that gave them a particular nerve to fight the bulls, which is of capital importance to the bullfighters. Basically, they are very easy horses.

In my opinion, their character. They have a fantastic temper, and then, of course, they have a number of other characteristics: they are compact, but despite of that, they are also elastic, with very short movements, very speedy above all, but I’d emphasize their good temper. They really have a fantastic character.”
